ACOL Founder ~ Ann Rose

ACOL Founder and President, Ann Rose, started working with abortion clinics in 1976. After graduation from the University of Tennessee in 1971, Ann moved to Atlanta GA, where she worked for the Atlanta Journal Constitution newspaper before taking a job with Hillcrest Clinic, a small Atlanta abortion clinic which was part of a national clinic group. She was then tapped in 1977 to open up Midtown Hospital, a specialty late abortion hospital that drew patients from all over the Southeast. While at Midtown, Ann developed some of the first marketing and advertising programs for clinics and was considered an expert in the field. She was also politically active and appeared frequently in local and national media. Since Midtown got patients from all over the Southeast, Ann traveled extensively and visited abortion clinics to educate their staff about late abortion. She also enthusiastically lobbied the Georgia legislature and Congress.

Ann left Midtown Hospital in 1989 to start a consulting group that worked with pharmaceutical companies and other vendors who supplied products to the abortion clinic market. In this role, she conducted staff seminars at abortion clinics all over the country. In total, she has probably personally visited over 500 abortion clinics over the years. She also developed the yearly "Trends" Conferences that drew hundreds of clinic participants. While working during the 90's with the National Women's Health Organization, a group of 8 clinics in smaller markets, Ann was instrumental in opening up a clinic in Jackson, MS in 1995. Today, it is the ONLY clinic left open in the State of Mississippi.

Throughout her career, Ann has never backed down or hidden her work with abortion clinics. She proudly continues to contribute to the political and social discourse through her Blog on the liberal DailyKos website at: www.dailykos.com/blog/abortion.
